How and Why Did Crook Develop In The Period Between 1851 and 1901?

Between 1851 and 1901 Crook developed into a thriving town that had a population of over 11,000. In 1841 Crook had a population of less than 600, so why did Crook's population rise so rapidly? The reasons for these changes are shown below.

The 1851 Census shows that the majority of Crook's population were employed in the
This would suggest that people were moving into the area to work in the Some examples of this are..... (Give examples of the types of jobs). In the 1901 census there are also other jobs available. Some examples of these are.....
These jobs would be to help support the..... as people would need food and clothes as well as houses to live in.

The maps of Crook in 1857 and 1897 also show how and why Crook was developing so quickly. Some examples of this are..... (Give examples from the maps).

The trade directories also show that Crook was developing fast. For example in 1858 there were..... (Give examples of the types of shops in Crook from a street). These would have been set up to support all the people who were moving into Crook to work in the coal industry. By 1902 the same street in Crook had..... (Compare with the 1858 trade directory).

In conclusion, by comparing and using different sources of information I think that Crook developed so quickly between 1851 and 1901 because.....
